Hi everybody! We're Chommers and Missy -- two bestest friends (and probably related -- either son and mother or brother and sister) who are in need of a good home.

Chommers: I am approximately 5 years old and very curious and playful. I get along well with other kitties, but sometimes I get in trouble with other animals because I try to be a little too friendly. I am a big boy at 18 pounds and have giant paws, a giant voice, and a giant heart. I got my name because my cheeks are so full my foster parents called them chommers. I can be a little jumpy, but I do love to be held and will follow you around like a dog.

Missy: I am a little calico girl weighing seven pounds. I am more timid than Chommers, but I do love to play (even by myself!), and I am an avid hunter. That means I love to catch things and bring them to you. I get along well with other kitties and am very maternal with Chommers. We both will need a little extra TLC because of our time on the street, so it would be great if we could be adopted together.
